

CHIPPewa FALLS PANIC STRICKEN.

Dynamite Is Used on the Menacing Ice Gorge
Without Effect.

Frightened Citizens Pack Their Goods Into Wagons and Run for Safety.

If the Ice Jam Should Break All at Once Nothing Could Save the City.

OTHER TOWNS ARE IN DANGER.

Water Has Receded Several Inches, but Gives Little Encouragement—Offers of Assistance for the Stricken Places.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Dec. 2.—This place and half a dozen neighboring towns are still menaced by the great ice gorge in the Chippewa River. All efforts to break or dislodge the gorge to-day were unsuccessful.

Over a thousand pounds of dynamite were exploded, but as fast as an aperture was made, debris and anchor ice would fill in, so that the gorge is to-night as solid as ever. The gorge is located some six miles above this town, being no more than fifty feet in height at one place. The waters of the river have been slowly backing up for three days, until the region just above the gorge resembles a fair-sized lake. If the gorge breaks in parts, the towns below will suffer little damage, but should it all break together, everything in the course of the stream would be swept away.

It is the spreading of the waters caused by the gorge remaining in its present condition that is creating the present alarm. Chippewa Falls is situated on a bend of the river and is in no danger during ordinary rises of the river. Should the waters break over the gorge and change the course of the river even half a mile to the west or north, Chippewa Falls is certain to suffer immensely. The towns likely to suffer with Chippewa Falls are Central Junction, Budget Mills, Magenta, Eau Claire, Shawtown, Red Cedar and Durand and Maxwell.

Many Offers of Aid.

The situation here to-night is slightly more hopeful. Telegrams have been pouring in upon the city all day offering assistance, and Governor Upham has wired Mayor Lindley that he stands ready to send succor at any time the conditions warrant. Mayor Lindley has replied that assistance is not necessary at present.

Since 8 o'clock to-night the water has receded several inches. The same conditions have prevailed for two previous nights, and those who have closely watched the situation are little encouraged by the fact. The river is now thoroughly congested with ice and snow, and there seems to be no chance of the water cutting its way through the gorge. The river at Eau Claire, twenty miles below Chippewa Falls, has fallen eighteen inches during the day, which indicates that the passage is becoming smaller and that less and less water is hourly passing beneath the gorge, which has caused all the trouble.

The situation here is exciting in the extreme. The city is literally panic stricken. Wild reports are constantly being brought to the city of havoc wrought by the streams above, and all predict that a terrible catastrophe impends. This condition of uncertainty is the cause of the intense excitement.

Nearly a Million Gone.

The destruction of property has reached enormous proportions. The loss is already nearly a million dollars, and the indications are that it will be much greater before the waters subside.

Fifty business structures in this city have been abandoned and the thoroughly alarmed people are making every effort to leave as little for the incoming waters to destroy as they possibly can. Two hundred teams and drays have rushed hither and thither all last night and to-day, and the streets are littered with various kinds of merchandise which spilled over the sides and ends of the overloaded wagons as they were hurried to places of safety.

The water remained stationary until about 3 o'clock this morning. Then it began to rise rapidly, and inside of four hours an additional four or five inches had been registered. The river at 10 o'clock was twenty-four feet high and rising.

Everything Moved Out.

The Spring street merchants, who had stored goods in second floors, determined to take no chances, and everything was moved to-day, and by night there was not a dollar's worth of material remaining. Business is abandoned, and the city is in a state of tumult. A large amount of dynamite reached here this morning, and men began trying to place it in order to break the jam.

The river at this point is fully three-quarters of a mile wide, and its surface is covered with anchor ice to a depth varying from ten to thirty feet. The most stubborn resistance offered by the obstruction is in that portion of the river between the wagon bridge and the Central Railroad bridge, about half a mile in length.

The gorge continues to grow in extent. It is now over five miles long, and in some places thirty to fifty feet high. It completely dams the river, and this is what is causing the rapid rise of the river here. The heavy rains of last week were followed by a sudden freeze, which quickly unassisted the floating ice in the Chippewa, and the swiftly running current continually added to it till it reached its present gigantic proportions. Below here the Chippewa is falling.

Other Gorges Formed.

A report that another gorge is forming at Little Falls, thirty miles above here, has been brought in, and increases the alarm, as in case of its breaking suddenly the whole city would be swept away.

At Flambeau Falls, fifteen miles above this city, another ice gorge has formed. The river has overflowed its banks and inundated the country to the extent of twenty miles on either side. Domestic animals have perished by the score, and farms and farm houses are flooded, and the losses will reach into the hundreds of thousands. These reports are meagre and uncorroborated, but it is safe to estimate that at least 3,000 horses, cows and hogs have met death in the flood.

Alarm at Eau Claire.

Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 2.—The Chippewa is slowly falling, but this only increases the alarm, because it indicates that water is accumulating at Chippewa Falls and elsewhere above here. The ice pack at Badger Hills, half way between Eau Claire and Chippewa Falls, is piling higher, and everything seems to indicate that the river is choking up more and more. At Portageville, three miles below this city, families which have moved out of their houses on the flats—about fifty persons in all—are sleeping in the schoolhouse and the church, and at their neighbors' houses.

DIVORCE LAW INVALID.

If You've Received a Decree in New Jersey,
Better Get Another in Order to Be Safe.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 2.—Justice Barklow has filed an opinion in the Court of Errors and Appeals declaring the divorce law of 1891 unconstitutional. The opinion states that a law permitting a limited divorce, attended by special consequences with regard to property rights, on the application of a person holding premises against absolute divorce and not otherwise, is contrary to the spirit of the Constitution of the State and the United States.

The opinion is on the suit of Middleton vs. Middleton, of Camden. It is possible that the decision may invalidate many divorces granted under the law, though lawyers are divided in opinion as to the effect of the decision. The opinion states that an act permitting a limited divorce, attended by special consequences with regard to property rights, and which imposes upon one person a kind of divorce which cannot apply to another for the same offence, because the consent of the former holds opinions which the consent of the latter does not, is a law which does violence to the Constitution. It also says that a classification of divorce that was defined only by an inquiry into the religious or political opinions of the parties was an act of the grossest and most fundamental law.

The decision at first excited much comment, as it was understood that the court had held the law allowing limited divorces to be void. This was not the case, and the decision will not affect a dozen cases that have come under it. It does even half that number. The law was passed to suit a class of people who seldom have a case for divorce. The few cases that have come under it will probably be reviewed by the Chancellor. The decrees of limited divorce will stand, but the property rights of the husband and wife will be settled under the original law.

BALDNESS DUE TO X RAYS

Wherever They Touched Hammond's Head
They Killed the Hair, Which Soon
After Fell Out.

Washington, Dec. 2.—"Superfuous Hair Removed by the X Ray Process" will be one of the signs of the future when Roentgen's discovery is made use of commercially. It has been demonstrated that the rays are dangerous, at least, of baldness from the use of the X rays. The case of Captain Webster has already been described, and now W. B. Hammond relates an experience which shows that depilation may follow the use of the Roentgen apparatus.

Mr. Hammond, who is a clerk in the Capitol Hill Post Office, was struck in the head by pieces of an exploding torpedo years ago while in the navy. An X-ray exposure to the forehead for the purpose of discovering if some of the pieces of the shell were imbedded in his forehead, the development of the photograph plate showed several pieces of iron in the frontal bone, but it was decided that an attempt to remove them would be unprofitable. Consequently, Mr. Hammond has gained nothing by the exposure.

He has lost hair, however, for about the temple and around the back of the ear, wherever, indeed, the X rays struck, he is perfectly bald. In speaking of the exposure and its results, Mr. Hammond said:

"I never thought anything about it till last Thursday, when I brushed my hair in the morning and this patch of hair just fell out. It did not hurt, and it wasn't inflamed, but the hair just naturally came out. Dr. Gray says that it takes long and repeated exposures to have any effect on the hair. Well, I've never overexposed myself in any case, thirty-one minutes each, at an interval of almost a week. Then the hair brushed out. There isn't anything the matter with the rest of my hair, but it is twisted like a rope, and almost lifted him off his feet. It's good quality, you see, and there isn't a sign of baldness, except where the X rays hit it."

NO PEACE FOR MILES.

Lawyer Bachrach Says He Will Have the Tax Certificate Case Investigated.

The action of Assistant District Attorney Miles, of Brooklyn, in frightening a constable into returning a tax certificate which he had seized in making a levy to satisfy a judgment may receive official investigation after all. District Attorney Backus does not seem inclined to take any steps in the matter, but Lawyer Bachrach is determined that the affair shall not be dropped without something being done to right his client, on whose judgment the tax certificate was seized.

"I don't know just what we will do in the matter," said Mr. Bachrach. "We may present the matter to the Grand Jury and see if anything can be accomplished in that way. If not, we will find some other way to obtain justice."

Mr. Miles says he has not been the attorney for Saloonkeeper Manning at any time, and the latter corroborates the statement, but the proprietor with which Mr. Miles acted in taking the saloonkeeper's case is remarkable. It was 3 o'clock on the afternoon of November 11 when Manning's tax certificate was seized. An hour and a half later Manning walked into the Fifth Precinct Station House to his saloon without the license which had been taken away from him. The record of the visit is on the station house blotter.

Reference Mr. Manning, proprietor of a liquor store, corner of Hudson avenue and Tillary street, came to this station at 6:35 this afternoon, with a letter from First Assistant District Attorney William O. Miles, who states that he thinks it was illegal for the constable to take the license of Manning's saloon, and if you will instruct the officer to allow the saloon to remain open until tomorrow I will see that the license is returned.

Mementos of Edgar Allan Poe.

E. B. Hill, of the Detroit Journal, has presented to the New York Shakespeare Society his unique collection of relics and mementos of Edgar Allan Poe, consisting of between 600 and 700 copies of Poe's first editions, contributions to magazines, and other memorabilia contemporary with the poet's life, being the collection of fifty years, collected by Poe himself, and placed in the room, when removed to Poe Park under the act of the New York Legislature of May last.

AQUATIC PALACE COMES TO PORT.

Varuna, Eugene Higgins's
New Yacht, Reaches Here
After a Rough Voyage.

She Is the Most Magnificent Pleasure Craft Afloat, Costing Half a Million Dollars.

Her Owner's Private Stateroom a Veritable Dream in White and Gold.

FLEW THE STARS AND STRIPES.

Unique Things in the Way of Bath Accommodations and a Fencing Room, of Which the Owner Is Extremely Proud.

A palace, built on the Clyde, sailed into this port yesterday morning, her funnels crisscrossed with salt, and her sides brown from contact with a sea that enabled her to prove to the complete satisfaction of her sailing master her seaworthy qualities. She was the steam yacht Varuna, the property of Eugene Higgins, and probably the most costly and luxurious pleasure craft afloat. There is no private home or public building in the city more sumptuously furnished. She is swift, safe and unassuming, a fit home for a king or an American millionaire. Notwithstanding the fact that she is Clyde-built, she sailed into port, and finally, late in the afternoon, tied up to the Robins dry dock, at Erie Basin, with the Stars and Stripes flying from her mainmast.

Mr. Higgins has been somewhat secretive regarding his aquatic palace from the moment of the joining of her first timbers to this hour. It is related that when she was building the Prince of Wales came aboard to inspect her, but the steward refused to allow him below the main deck, because the steward had his orders, and the eldest son of the Queen and Empress was not provided with a card from Mr. Higgins. This same secretiveness prevailed yesterday afternoon. Mr. Higgins boarded his yacht at Quarantine yesterday morning and gave positive orders that no one should be allowed to inspect her, but despite this a Journal representative, with an artist, was shown through the entire vessel late in the afternoon.

Outwardly she is not especially attractive, as compared with those yachts built in this country, having the customary homely lines of foreign-built yachts. In fact, there are many features which are foreign here and the tropics that present as handsome an appearance as does the Varuna. She is about 164 feet on her water line, has a draught of 12 feet, and a tonnage of 1,574 tons. She has 15-horse engines, with one-half inch glass. Her engines are quadruple expansion, with surface cylinders, and other other engines, including twenty-eight engineers, stokers and others to bring her across from Greenock, whence she sailed November 21. She made the voyage at an average speed of about fifteen knots an hour.

It is the magnificence of the Varuna's furnishings that will make her conspicuous among other craft. The cabin is a dream of white and gold; the drawing room a vista of mahogany and plush; the breakfast room, the staterooms, the dining room, even the bath, are furnished with a splendor never before accorded any craft. The cost of the vessel is said to have been something over a half million dollars, and the work alone in the various apartments must have cost a fortune. The dining room is of dull oak, the owner's stateroom of the choicest maple, with mahogany, while the other rooms have as borderings and furniture woods equally rich and costly. There are accommodations for twenty-three guests. There are also two bathrooms for the guests, with porcelain tubs, providing hot, cold, and shower baths.

The bath of Mr. Higgins is even more elaborate, opening from his chamber, and enabling him, by very ingenious plumbing arrangements, to have, as he wishes, Russian, Turkish, or needle spray, shower, hot and cold, salt or fresh baths. The room of Mr. Higgins is about thirty-five by twenty-three feet in size. Adjoining this apartment, both on the port and starboard sides, are two chambers, somewhat smaller in size, but scarcely less rich in furnishing, containing as they do brass bedsteads, moquette carpets and upholstered furniture. These rooms are evidently intended for especially favored guests. The other guest rooms are smaller, but their furnishings and appointments are rich. The main dining room will seat twenty guests comfortably, and contains, among other novelties, a revolving swinging table. Mr. Higgins, it is expected, will give a reception on board as soon as she is released from dry dock. Especially proud is the owner of his dining room, a spacious apartment, at where fencing, boxing and other athletics may be indulged in. Considerable interest will be felt in Mr. Watson's forthcoming production, now nearly completed, but of nearly 2,000 tons, one for Ogden Goelet, the Mayflower, and the Sadava for Robert Goelet, of this city, and a third yacht for Mr. Drexel, of Philadelphia.

HUNGRY LABORERS FIGHT FOR WORK.

FOREIGNERS OFFER CHEAP LABOR.

Native Workmen Endeavor to Dissuade Them

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 2.—Two battles have been fought here, yesterday and to-day, between American and Italian laborers, and blood has been spilled. There is almost a state of warfare in the city between the two factions. Crowds gathered yesterday at Prospect and Pennington avenues to apply for work on the new reservoir. There were nearly 2,000 men, who had been idle for months and whose families were suffering. One-tenth of them were Italians, the most of whom have been brought into the city recently.

The Italians began to offer to work for half rates. The Americans resented this, and a delegation was sent to the Italians to tell them they must stand by living wages or take the consequences. The Americans were demanding from $1.50 to $1.25 a day. The Italians would not listen to the delegation, and the Americans drew nearer to hear what was going on.

A wrangle followed in which some one struck a blow. This was a signal, and the Italians drew knives. The Americans seized sticks and stones, and in a mass rushed upon the Italians. A short, sharp conflict followed, but the Italians were outnumbered and fled, followed by volleys of stones.

Many of the American laborers obtained employment, and the crowd remained till late in the evening to prevent the Italians from reappearing. Early this morning, in the vicinity of the ground where the work was begun, big bonfires were lighted by the laborers who came before daylight. It was bitter cold, and the men huddled round the fires, waiting eagerly to go to work.

All at once word came that a padrone had gone to the contractor to offer to do cheap labor. Fearful that their long hoped for work might thus be taken away from them the Americans charged upon a body of Italians, who had gathered nearby, and forced them down a street parallel with Pennington avenue.

They had not gone far when a Steilman, Bing Salvatore, stopped a carriage coming up the street, and, stepping behind it, began firing into the crowd of pursuers with a revolver.

William Lenox, who lives at No. 1114 Lambert street, one of the leaders of the pursuing workmen, stepped behind a tree. His left arm was exposed, however, and a bullet struck it. The Italian kept on firing and shot one other man, who was taken away by his friends before his name could be learned.

Shooting was sent for, and, hurrying to the scene, ordered the crowd to disperse. Twenty special deputies were sworn in by him and the ground was there-oughly picketed by his officers, with instructions to keep all visitors moving and to prevent the gathering of a crowd.

Salvatore is in a cell at the Central Police Station. There is great excitement in the city to-night.

For a long time there has been much distress here, caused by lack of work. The factories have been idle and the industries almost at a standstill. Want has been on every side. When it was announced the city was to build a reservoir that was to cost half a million, there was rejoicing that there would be work.

The contractor, Lewis Lawton, before signing the contract agreed that none but residents of Trenton should be employed, and said he would discriminate against all foreigners.

While awaiting the decision of the court Fallon worked in the County Clerk's office as an index clerk, and the city paid him $200. Controllor Fitch held up Van der Carr's pay as second warrant, believing that Commissioner Wright had no authority to create the office. He also declined to pay Fallon for the time he had worked in Mr. Purroy's office. He submitted both subjects to Corporation Counsel Scott. The latter, in an opinion yesterday, stated that Wright could legally create a place for Van der Carr, if his department had funds to pay him. Mr. Scott also said that the $200 could be deducted from Fallon's account.

From this time on the wardens will each receive $2,500 a year.
